- The Rev. Colonel J. W. T McMullen, the preacher warrior, in command of a regiment now in Kentucky, left, we understand, yesterday to join it. Before he took his departure a numher of the ladies of the congregation in this city, of which he formerly was pastor, presented him with sundry delicacies-preserved peaches, boiled chickens and the like, to cheer and comfort him in camp to the hard and dangerous duties of which the fair donors knew he was unaccustomed. The preacher Colonel must be taken care of. He must have "valler legs" and soft boiled eggs even though every poor soldier under him starves. Let the preacher go to war with stones in his sling like David of old, and his belly with fat capon lined, but let patriotic privates, mere food for powder, die hungry. What's the difference? An Insight into "Second Sight" -- Easy if You Knew how how it is Done. Just now, in the succession of magical entertainments afforded our citizens, the following explanation of the marvels of "second sight" may interest our readers, who are just now being great ly mystified o' nights at Metropolitan Hall. We find it in the Missouri Democrat, as an expose of Heller, according to which authority the system of second sight is a system of preconcerted questions and answers. The same question differently arranged requires different answers, thus:

(1) Ques.—Is it plain or ornamented? Ans.— (2) Q - is it or mmeated or plain? A -

There are questions relating to color, precious stones, metals, wearing apparel, jewelry, &c. As, Q -What color is it? A -Black.

Q .- What is the color? A .- Blue. Q .- Tell me the color? A .- Green. Q -Has it a golor? A .- White. Q -Any color? A -Orange or vellow. Q -- Name the color? A -- Brown. The following for metals:

Q -- What metal? A -- Gold. Q -What is the metal? A -Silver. Q -Tell me the metal? A .- Copper. Q -- Name the metal? A -- Iron or steel. Q .- What metal is it? A .- Brass. And so on for the different articles mentioned

There is also a list, and a very extensive one,

Q .- What have I here? A .- A purse. Q - What is this? A .- A toothpick. Q .- This will puzzle you? A -A court plas-

By thus having questions and answers classified and arranged, an article of any kind can be very accurately described, requiring, generally, however, a combination of the questions of different classes. Thus: Q .- Is this for any purpose? A .- Of course

The audience will observe that he does not dispense with the question till Fred's back is turned, and he (Fred) within a few teet of the curtain. They will also observe that the articles Mr. Heller holds up are not the small ones, con cerning which he had asked questions. This time they are large-a hat, a muff, a shawl, a set of furs, or something which can easily be seen by a person behind the curtain, who is so near to Fred as almost to be able to whisper in his ears. bill as it now stands. Mr. Kellogg of Hilmois spoke on the bill. Mr. Sherman said the bitl did not meet the difficulty. A year ago we were physically weak with no public debt, but now we are physically strong but financially weak. The total amount be less than $550,000,000. This is a greater expense than ever was borne by any nation. The highest expenditure of Great Britain was never five hundred millions dollars a year, not even in the war with Napoleon. Mr. Sherman here quoted from the Loudon Post the Government organ, which said that we (the United States Government) were approachticing phantom of free trade and commercial, ing national bankruptcy. In his judgment three propositions were needed. 1. The prompt levy of The Times has the following correspondence; a tax of not less than one hundred million dol-Vallandigham, Pendleton and Corning, with lars; 2. A careful revision of the laws regulating
